

BIO: VICTORIA BLADE

FULL VERSION:

An Atlanta-based singer/songwriter, Victoria Blade's classically trained pipes transfer seamlessly into her heartfelt, indie folk style. Think Feist meets the playful charm of The Moldy Peaches. Award-nominated and touted as "a modern folk masterpiece," Victoria's dynamic voice carries the clear tone and jazzy soul of a bygone era, while her hopeful lyrics and Americana-infused melodies reflect on the often unpredictable life of the modern artist.

Victoria Blade's debut solo album "Lo-Fi Love Songs" is set to release via indie label Already Dead Tapes & Records in May 2019. Recorded straight to cassette tape, these acoustic songs hiss and fuzz through a thoughtful journey, rooted in a deep revelation of the power of that infamous four-letter word. No stranger to the underground cassette scene, Victoria helps run Already Dead Tapes alongside her husband Josh Tabbia.

Already an accomplished actress (recently sharing the screen with Diane Keaton and Paul Giamatti), music and acting have always intertwined for Victoria, who got her start simultaneously acting and composing indie folk tunes for original plays in Chicago. Her work has been nominated for Best Music in a Play by the Jeff Award Committee and her song "Let Hope Rise" was heralded as "a modern folk masterpiece" by Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Mark Konkol.

"Lo-Fi Love Songs" will be released May 31st, 2019 and available on all streaming platforms. Keep up with Victoria Blade on Instagram and learn more here: www.victoriablade.com.

SHORT VERSION:

An Atlanta-based singer/songwriter, Victoria Blade's classically trained pipes transfer seamlessly into her heartfelt, indie folk style. Think Feist meets the playful charm of The Moldy Peaches. Touted as "a modern folk masterpiece," Victoria's dynamic voice carries the clear tone and jazzy soul of a bygone era, while her hopeful lyrics and Americana-infused melodies reflect on the unpredictable life of the modern artist. Her debut solo album "Lo-Fi Love Songs" is set to release via Already Dead Tapes & Records in May 2019. Keep up with Victoria on Instagram and learn more here: www.victoriablade.com